Marina Schuster has been a member of the German Bundestag since 2005 and has become one of her country’s leading figures in the fields of foreign policy and human rights. She is a longtime member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs as well as the Committee on Human Rights and Humanitarian Aid, and serves as the spokeswoman of the Free Democratic Party parliamentary group for human rights and humanitarian aid. Both committees oversee German foreign policy towards all nations around the world and key international organizations such as the United Nations. She sits on the boards of the United Nations Association of Germany (UNA-Germany), the German Africa Foundation, the German Foundation for Peace Research, the German Institute for Development Evaluation (DEval), and the Hirschfeld Eddy Foundation for LGBT Rights. Most recently, she joined the Justice for Sergei Magnitsky Interparliamentary Group, an international network of human rights politicians from Britain, Canada, Estonia, Germany, Italy, Norway, the Netherlands, Spain, and Sweden. Prior to serving in parliament, she worked as an academic and in the financial markets. She is a member of the Young Leaders Programs of both the American Council on Germany as well as the Atlantik-Brücke, two prestigious nonpartisan associations with the goal of building a bridge between Germany and the United States.
