Join the University of La Verne's nationally and globally ranked debate team for the 2015 edition of our high school speech and debate camp!

This year's camp will include two weeks of instruction and practice in all speech and debate events except for policy debate. All students will be given basic knowledge and information on all speech and debate events and then they will be able to pick 2-4 events to focus on for the majority of the camp. Students will also be receiving lectures from University of La Verne faculty on many subject areas such as political science, philosophy, economics, and speech communication.

Camp tuition (including staying on campus in the dorms) is $500 and includes continental breakfast, as well as lunch and dinner, at the university's dining hall. Students have the option to dorm or commute. On-campus stay in the dorms is included in the $500 this year, making the camp even more affordable than before. The students will stay in ULV's newest dorms, the “Vista La Verne” Dorms, which offer double or single rooms in a suite structure.

Our camp is traditionally small and best for beginner and intermediate students. We offer a more individualized camp than most as a result of the smaller population of students that we attract. We generally have a student to staff ratio of around 3:1.

You can sign up for the camp online, with the website coming soon! Space is limited, so it is best to register as soon as possible!

Sign ups will close on June 26th, 2015. The registration page will include questions about the student's previous involvement in speech and debate so that we can best assess what courses to place them in when the camp begins. For further inquiries, or to get a jump-start on registration, please feel free to contact the camp directors Rob Ruiz or Brittany Boiko (taking over this year for graduating senior Melanie Nadon) at ULVdebatecamp@gmail.com.
